ARIZONA NEWS AND COMMENT

Rush of Freight.

Should the present rush continue for any length of time, a new record will be established for business handled on the Tucson division, says the Star. Crews are in demand to take out the trains and every available engine on the division is required to keep the freight moving. Trainmen are allowed only the minimum number of hours for a layover at a freight division point, which is eight hours out of every twenty-four, or ten hours when they have been on duty for sixteen hours. This is a requirement of the interstate commerce commission. The big increase in freights is due to the fact that lines in the east were blockaded by snows and storms while those in California were tied up by bad washouts. All of the delayed freight is now being rushed to its destination as rapidly.

Building at Courtland.

Contrary to reports which have reached Bisbee from time to time since the new Courtland townsite was opened, building operations are going ahead with vim, says the Review. A number of business houses are under construction at this time, and as rapidly as lumber can be brought in, other structures are to be started. Among the principal business houses now in course of erection is a hotel, capital for which is furnished by a coterie of Douglas men headed by Alfred Paul. J. E. Cowan is preparing to build a modern structure, which will be started shortly. A drug store has been started, as well as a number of other business houses.

Rioting Students.

Twenty howling high school students, many of them in the "make-up" assumed for an amateur theatrical entertainment given at the high school earlier in the evening, invaded the streets of Phoenix last night and made a racket that would have put to shame a pack of coyotes. When everyone on the streets had put cotton in his ears the students went to O'Neill's dance hall and made more noise. The police were asked to calm the youngsters down, which they did. Captain Hy McDonald gathered the young men around him and read them a little essay on "Serenity; or, How to Behave in Public." Several of the boys asked the captain as a particular favor, to arrest them for their own glory and the prestige of the school which they represented. The captain replied that they were not old enough to be arrested and that the city jail was not a nursery. He simply told them that curfew had rung and they would better run along home.

Appointment Made.

The dispute in the Tucson city council over the appointment of a superintendent of the water department was finally settled Tuesday by Mayor Heney naming H. G. Brown, former superintendent of the Presbyterian Indian school, for a period of three months to succeed Thomas Conlon. The appointment was confirmed by a unanimous vote, Councilman Martin changing his vote from nay to aye. Mr. Brown was named after a lively tilt in which Mayor Heney and Councilman Drachman had the chief part. The mayor and councilman waxed warm at times in their discussion.

Beautiful Sight.

Undersheriff C. B. Wood of Maricopa county made a trip to Roosevelt, and Phoenix paper says he saw a sight which he will probably never see again and which few persons had ever seen before. He went up Sunday, February 2, and when the stage reached the top of the divide between Tortilla flat and Fish creek, a snow and hail storm broke. When the party reached a point near the bottom of the divide, on the other side, and sun broke through the clouds and the people on the stage could see four waterfalls. The water was tumbling from the top of the divide hundreds of feet into a wash that winds down the side of the mountain. Philander Knox, son of Senator Philander Knox of Pennsylvania, was one of the party, and with him were two companions. The three had visited Yellowstone park and other natural wonders, but they said that they had never seen anything as beautiful on the whole trip.

Carbolic Acid Route.

C. C. Leech committed suicide at Ray Tuesday evening by drinking carbolic acid. Leech was about 55 years of age and had been employed by the Ray Copper company. The last few days he had been drinking heavily and was no doubt out of his head at the time of taking the poison. J. C. Thorpe, the county undertaker, took the body in charge and buried it in the Ray graveyard.

Geological Survey.

F. C. Schrader, government geologist, and J. M. Hill, junior geologist in the employ of the government, arrived in Tucson last evening from Washington, where they have their headquarters. They are here for the purpose of making a geological survey of the Santa Rita, Empire mountains and the Patagonia section. They expect to spend the next two or three months in the mountains making their survey. They will make a report to the government on the general physical features of the district which they are to survey. They will also report on the possibilities of the districts from a mining standpoint.

Newspaper Changes Hands.

The Arizona Democrat has been sold by the State Consolidated Publishing company to Frank DeSouza, E. P. Wilson and W. D. Bell, all of Phoenix. DeSouza and Wilson had the Democrat last year on a lease and since the first of this year have been negotiating for the purchase of the paper outright, and have now succeeded in doing so.
